I can place people and events in a chronological framework	Remember and talk about significant events in their own experiences.	Sequence photographs from different parts of their life. Match objects to people of different ages.	Sequence events in their life. Sequence artefacts (such as toys) from different points in history.	Order people and events from different points in history on an unscaled timeline.
I can describe the characteristic ideas , beliefs and attitudes of different cultures over time.	Know about similarities and differences between themselves and others.	Know about similarities and differences between themselves and others, and among families, communities and traditions.	Describe people's beliefs from the past (such as Columbus and flat Earth theory).	Describe people's beliefs from the past and why they might be different to our own (e.g. ideas on medicine in Florence Nightingale's time).
I can recognise and describe similarities and differences, continuity and change .	Recognise the difference between past and present in their own lives.	Recognise the difference between past and present in their own and others' lives.	Compare similarities and differences about individuals or items (such as toys) from the past.	Describe what has changed as the result of an event or an individual (such as city design after the Great Fire of London).
I can talk about the significance of historical events.	Talk about events in their own experiences that are important to them.	Describe an event or family member from their past that is important to remember	Describe why an event or individual from the past is important for us to learn about (e.g. in discoveries and exploration).	Describe how an important event or an individual is remembered and why (such as GFOL, WW2, FN and MS in medicine).
I can identify and describe reasons for and results of , events, situations and changes.	Know and recount episodes from their own past.	Know and recount episodes from their own and others' past, saying why it happened.	Know and recount episodes from stories about the past, saying why it happened (e.g. Matilda's escape from Oxford Castle).	Recognise why people did things, why events happened and what happened as a result (such as the Evacuation in WW2).
I can discern how and why contrasting arguments and interpretations of the past have been constructed.	Read different versions of the same (traditional) stories.	Use stories to encourage children to distinguish between fact and fiction.	Compare stories/myths to different accounts of events to encourage children to distinguish between fact and fiction (looking at Robin Hood in medieval England).	Compare 2 versions of a past event. Compare pictures or photographs of people or events in the past. Discuss reliability of photos/accounts/stories (use of photos for propaganda in WW2).

I can make connections, draw contrasts and analyse trends.	Children talk about past and present events in their own lives.	Talk about past and present events in their own lives and in the lives of family members.	Compare the lives of different people within one place or era (e.g. groups of people living in castles)	Describe the impact of an individual on modern lives in Britain and beyond (e.g. Florence Nightingale and medicine).
I can describe how evidence is used to make historical claims (includes evaluation)	Can talk about some of the things they have observed.	Talk about some of the things they have observed, question why things happen and give explanations.	Use a source of information to find out about someone's life in the past. Give examples of different sources of evidence (e.g. artefacts like old toys).	Begin to make inferences about the lives of people from the past based on physical evidence (e.g. diary of Samuel Pepys, alive at the time as GFOL).
I can create structured accounts , including written narratives and analyses .	Understands how and why questions. Begins to use more complex sentences to link thoughts. Talks about why things happen and how things work.	Answer 'how' and 'why' questions about their experiences and in response to events. Develop their own explanations by connecting ideas and events	Use key terms: yesterday, last week, last year, when I was younger, a long time ago, before I was born, when my parents were younger, king, queen, similar, different, timeline, invention. Use 'because' to explain why events happened.	Use key terms specifically linked to content on curriculum map. Use 'because' in writing and terms such as investigate and evidence to justify historical inferences.

I can place people and events in a chronological framework	Order events on a scaled time line including BC and AD. Use dates and	Order events on a scaled time line (centuries), including BC and AD.	Order events on a scaled time line (created by pupils).	Order events on a scaled timeline, including dates BC and AD (in particular overlapping points in History).
I can describe the characteristic ideas , beliefs and attitudes of different cultures over time.	Describe people's beliefs from the past and how that affected their actions.	Describe people's beliefs from the past, how that affected their actions and what was the result.	Study different aspects of people's beliefs in the past. Compare the lives of different people within one place or era and suggest reasons for the differences in attitudes towards men and women (why are most recognised inventors men?), rich and poor (such as in factory workers in 1900s).	Find out about beliefs, behaviour and characteristics of people, recognising that not everyone shares the same views and feelings. Compare beliefs and behaviour with another time studied (e.g. Greeks with early Islam).
I can recognise and describe similarities and differences, continuity and change .	Compare lives of people from the distant past to our own and identify differences.	Continue to compare lives of people from the distant past to our own and explain why there are differences.	Compare lives of people from the past to our own, giving reasons for the differences based on my understanding of the period.	Evaluate similarities and differences between studied civilisations and our own. · Describe similarities and differences between concurrent civilisations and begin to give reasons for the differences (through Y6 year enquiry on democracy).
I can talk about the significance of historical events.	Understand how the earliest events in history contributed to the formation of civilisation.	Explain how individuals or events contributed to national change and identity.	Describe how national and international events affected local lives in the past (e.g. the effect of wartime on Oxford factory workers).	Develop an awareness of how the same event could impact different groups in different ways (e.g. how growth of democratic ideas led to civil rights/female emancipation).
